THE RD SERIES INDUCTION system isn't cheap (it's up there with the Pipercross and the BMC) but this is offset when you look at the quality and engineering involved with this well thought-out piece of kit.

This system is designed to specifically boost mid-range grunt and power and where some enclosed systems have the shielded filter in the engine bay, the Injen system is cleverly run behind the front bumper. This locates the filter away from the hot engine to ensure the engine can only draw in colder more dense air, which gives more power than warm air.

Like the Pipercross Vector, Injen have dyno plots that show a healthy 12bhp power increase (for this Civic Type R kit) and reckon that these kits can give even more on certain cars.

This RD Series kit is also available in powder-coated black for a stealthy look.
